

COAST MODE

The Sander Guys' 2026 Getaway

The crew, together on the coast and ready for whatever looked interesting.

The Best Kind of Getaway

Sometimes the best trips are the ones built around a simple idea: get the guys together, head for the coast, and leave plenty of room for whatever sounds fun.

That was the spirit of the Sander guys' recent getaway. There was no need to turn every hour into an event. The fun came from being in the same place, swapping jokes, following a few curiosities, and enjoying a change of scenery with the bros.

A coastal bookstore stop meant fresh finds, good covers, and a little something for the road.

The Bookstore

A local bookstore was an easy win. Everyone could wander at his own pace, scan the shelves, and come away with something that matched his particular brand of curiosity. The smiles outside said the browsing paid off—books and comics in hand, the trip already had its first souvenirs.

Bigfoot at the Door

From books, the crew moved on to a place where the stories get much stranger: Ripley's Believe It or Not! World of Adventure. A towering Bigfoot made the perfect greeter and an even better photo partner.

Meeting the local legend, posing with the bright Ripley's entrance, and leaning into the weirdness.

That is the charm of a stop like Ripley's. It gives grown men complete permission to be tourists—to pose, laugh, point at the ridiculous details, and see who can find the most unbelievable thing in the room. Nobody needed to play it cool, which made the stop even better

A Tour Through the Unbelievable

Inside, every turn offered a new photo opportunity. The guys stepped into an Oval Office scene, faced down a warrior, squeezed into unusual spaces, checked out a classic vehicle, and found a few familiar larger-than-life characters along the way.

Presidential poses, heroic company, curious doorways, and one very memorable ride.

The exhibits were entertaining, but the real highlight was the running commentary from the group. A museum full of oddities is fun on its own; with the right crew, it becomes a shared collection of inside jokes before the day is even over.

The getaway's home base: a place to sit down, regroup, laugh, and simply hang out.

Back at the Beach House

After a day of browsing and exploring, the beach house was exactly where everyone wanted to land. No tickets, no lines, no agenda, just a comfortable place to settle in and keep the good time going.

Those quieter stretches are often what make a guys' trip memorable. The crew could trade stories from the day, tease each other about the photos, lounge around, and enjoy the rare luxury of having nowhere else they had to be. The coast provided the setting; the beach house gave the trip its easygoing rhythm.

Good Times, Sander Style

The trip did not need a packed itinerary to feel full. A bookstore offered a little discovery. Ripley's supplied plenty of surprises. The beach house brought everyone back together for the kind of relaxed hangout that is hard to schedule in everyday life.

More than anything, the getaway was a reminder that “doing something” and “doing nothing” can fit perfectly into the same weekend. The Sander guys got both: a few memorable adventures, plenty of photos, and unhurried time with the bros.

Until the next Sander guys getaway.